ABOUT ME

Batuhan Keskiner is a multi-disciplinary photographer, filmmaker, and educator currently based in Amsterdam.

In his artistic practice, he investigates power structures with a primary focus on the relations between the state and the individual.

Growing up in Turkey, a country with a particularly turbulent political history, he inevitably witnessed various forms of state oppression.

These experiences moved him to investigate the different manifestations of authority and ideology that govern Turkish society.

His main interests are the visual communication strategies of propaganda and its role in the construction of narratives around nationalism, militarism, and patriotic myths.
