Nightride

2024, installation, dried horse ears (dog treats), leather whip

Nightride is an installation consisting of a whip and 48 horse ears. The horse's ears—formerly the highest and most dignified part of the animal—are now displayed at their natural height, yet their past grandeur has faded.

The piece invites viewers to reflect on how symbols of strength can rise, fall, and return in different forms. Through this transformation, the artwork explores the enduring, yet ever-changing dynamics of authority, control and dominance.
